when the Ordinance came into force will somewhat delay the revenue attaining estimated figures, but it is anticipated that anticipation is perfectly reasonable. It is well known that in not a few establishments existing stocks have not been depleted yet, but, that notwithstanding, the figures for the three and a half months of last year may be taken as an indication that the estimate of seven and a half lakhs for 1910 is not likely to be greatly in excess of the sum realised.

Whether it will rise sufficiently in later years to meet the full interest on the capital problematical, but so far as the initial stages are concerned the operation of the liquor law does not warrant any gloomy fears.

The results expected and the revenue estimated should certainly be realised, and the Colony may justly feel grateful to the happy inspiration which induced Siz Fred-ERICK LUGARD to help the Colony out of financial difficulties by such an expedient.

That there are good grounds for such an optimistic outlook is furnished by thereport, which concludes: "I would remark that while safeguarding the revenue by the observance of the Ordinance much leniency has had to be shown so as to allow one and all to fall in with the regulations, but a gradual strict application of the law will now become necessary." To such an attitude no objec-

Hongkong, June 7th, 1910. THE spirit of conciliation which marked the conduct of the Liquors Ordinance in the Legislative Council has also distinguished the administration of the Ordinance, and the officials entrusted with the inauguration of the Customs service in Hongkong, as well as the Government which created it, are certainly entitled to congratulations on the absence of friction and the smooth working of the measure. The report of the Imports spiece, and each of the players $3. and Exports Office, with regard to the liquor traffic, must be regarded as satisfactory. During the period under review-from 17th September to 31st December, 1909—the revenue collected on liquors and licences withdrawn by the police at the Magistracy amounted to $101,844.20; of which yesterday. $32,603.61 was on European liquors and sum of $101,844 might seem an inadequate ference in its tradal facilities, but having The fine was paid, he advised that the estimate of revenue from mainly on a rice, the other on a wheat diet.

The Library was, therefore, used by 410 persons and the Museum by 1,915.

The buildings of the Zojoji Tomple in Shiba Park, Tokyo, which were reduced to ashes about a year ago, will be reconstructed at a cost of Y.1,000,000. One half of the amount will be contributed by the subordinate temples of the same sect, and the other half by the citizens of Tokyo, mostly those of the Shiba district. Foreign contributions will also be accepted—a token of the disappearance of the old religious bigotry.

On Sunday night a Chinese gained admittance to a residence on the first floor of a house in Connaught Bond West by means of a water pipe. He was departing with a box of clothing valued at $30 when the inmates discovered his presence and raised the cry of thief. The intruder was arrested by a lukong, and at the Magistracy yesterday Mr. E. R. Hallifax sentenced him to six weeks' imprisonment and six hours' stocks.

A Chinese youth appeared before Mr. J. R. Wood at the Magistracy yesterday on a charge of breaking and entering a curio shop at No. 11 D'Aguilar Street. The youth made a hole in the door, inserted his hand and withdrew the bolt. An Indian watchman who passed later noticed the door stood ajar, and on entering found the shopbreaker. His Worship orderep the defendant to be detained for 48 hours, and sentenced him to ten strokes of the birch.

Some very strong remarks appear in the Hochi regarding the tendency of Japanese business men to make use of political influence in order to establish themselves in economic circles. this permicious custom is carried too far, says the Tokyo journal, it will lead to the utter destruction of the credit of those business men who resort to such practices. London, June 5th. The Tsar has conferred the Order of Saint Andrew upon Prince Fushimi.

PRUSSIA AND THE POPE.

LONDON, June 5th. A Papal encyclical issued on the Borromeo has caused a storm of indignation in Prussia owing to the Pope's strictures on the Protestant reformers contemporary with Bor-

Diet and a demand has been made for Government action to prevent a repetition of the offence.

Carlo Borromeo, a Romish saint, was born at the castle of Arona, upon the Lago Maggiore, on October 2nd, 1538 and died at Milan on November 4th, 1584. Although he was immediately worshipped as a saint he was not canonised till 1610. Borromeo restored proper deceney and dignity to divine service, brought about a reformation in church manners, and helped to remove many abuses which had overrun the church. On the death of his elder brother, the Pope of the day advised him to marry, so that the noble family to which he belonged might not become extinct but he declined and continued his work in the church

In the matches played on May 30th and 31st and June 1st .- Sussex beat Notts at Brighton by 78 runs; Lancashire beat Warwickshire at Birmingham by an innings and 48 runs; and Gloucestershire bear Surrey at the Oval by six wickets. The match between Yorkshire and Hampshire, at Bradford, was abandoned.

THE CHINCHOW-AIGUN RAILWAY

LONDON, June 2nd. Professor Santaro Okomatau, a Director of occasion of the tercentenary of Saint the South Manchurian Railway Company, replying to a letter from Messrs. Finally, Professor Okomatsu denies that Japan ever attempted to interfere with the right of China to develop the resources within her own territory.

THE MANCHURIAN QUESTION.

LONDON, June 2nd. "The New York Times," "regretfully," attacking the President, Mr. W. H. Taft, for inactivity in regard to the Manchurian question, declares that the Americans have gone very far towards making themselves a nonentity in the Far East, and adds that there are good grounds for believing that the interests of Germany and the United States in the Orient are so nearly identical thatdiplomatic action in support of a common policy might have been had lately.

RAILWAY RATES IN AMERICA

Washington, May 31st. The increase of railroad freight rates has aroused bitter resentment throughout the country. A storm of protest is going up from the Press of the agricultural and stock-rising section. The Government is being urged to interpose and prevent the raise going into effect. It is estimated that the arbitrary raise in rates will net is made by the roads on the pretext that The Councils of Kings called in haste to learn it is necessary because of a recent increase in the pay of the employees of the roads.

Political capital is being made out of To him came all captains of men, all achievers the action of the roads throughout the sections most affected.

KING EDWARD'S COFFIN.

The coffin containing the body of King Edward VII. was constructed of polished panelled oak. It had eight side panels, and was furnished with heavy brass Princess handles and corner Dieces.

The lid had two panels, the device of the Imperial Crown occupying the one at the head while at the foot the Star of the Garter and the motto, "Honi Scit Qui Mal y Pense," engraved. Between these panels there was a heavy plate of brass, bearing the following Latin

WAR AGAINST OIL TRUST.

There is great rivalry in Western Texas at present between the Standard Oil Trust and several independent companies to secure land where new oil deposits have just been found. Under this rivalry lands for many miles about Toyar, not far from the border of New Mexico, have leaped up in value from practically nothing to £3,000 per acre.

The independent companies were first on the spot, and have been able to lease or buy more

The Oil Trust immediately sent agents to the their company, captured a few of the new wells. As soon as it was known that the Standard Oil He heard that his people had need of him; Company was the purchaser the owners began to contest the sales which were not wholly com-

The new combination, under Mr. John W. Gates, the well-known capitalist, who a few months ago organised a company in Texas to fight the "octopus," is supporting the landowners and the independent promoters. Feeling is so strong in Texas against the Standard Company that it is believed that the trust will be obliged to relinquish their partly-purchased claims. With this new "find" of oil the war against the trust is immensely strengthened.

IN SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

BEFORE HIS HONOUR MR. F. A. HAZELAND (ACTING PUISNE JUDGE).

A JEWELLER'S, CLAIM.

Messre. C. Gaupp & Co. proceeded against J. Grant to recover $725 due for jewellery. Defendant admitted the debt and judgment was entered for plaintiffs.

ARREARS OF RENT. E. D. Bassoon & Co. v. Chan Kit was a claim for $39 due for three months' rent of the first and second floors of No. 10, Shanghai Street. An assistant in the plaintiff firm proved the debt and judgment was entered against the defendant.

SEAMEN SUING Six Chinese seamen brought action against the Hamburg America Line claiming an aggregate amount of $528.75 for wages.

Mr. H. K. Hung (of Messrs. Deacon, Looker & Deacon) appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Davidson (of Messrs. Hastings & Hast-

Mr. Hung stated that the cases were similar and raised the same issue, therefore he would ask his Lordship to take one of them as a test case. He was applying for discovery.

Mr. Davidson-That cannot be done except by consent. I will ask your Lordship to grant an adjournment. The proper course is to apply in chambers for an order. A considerable amount of money is involved, and my friend can take out summonses if he wants a test action. I think it much better that these interlocutary matters should be applied for in chambers.

Mr. Hung-It is merely a question of saving His Lordship adjourned the cases until Friday and made an order for mutual discovery.

HOME AND CHINA AFFAIRS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, May 18th. ENGLAND'S SOBROW.

It is impossible to exaggerate the emotions that have convulsed this country since the death of King Edward-and other countries as well. It has happened that I have had correspondence with people of many nationalities within the past ten days, and in one and all the same spirit of grief has been expressed. In France he was an especial favourite, and it is a fact that English people who have been in Paris and have sought to buy black attire have found the task no light one, for thousands of Frenchmen and women have mourned with us over the loss of " le bon Edouard." And from Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland, America, the story is the same -" Edward the Poacemaker" was a force whose value is better known now than when he lived. At the time of writing Kings and Queens are gathering in this capital of the Empire to testify to the international regard for the dead ruler. But more impressive than these have been the miles of waiting masses of our own folk, stretching in quoues to pass by the bier in Westminster Hall. I do not recollect such a tremendous outburst of affliction when Queen Victoria died, great as was the demonstration of affection shown to the Royal family at that time. But the King was taken so suddenly and he had so much of the human spark that knit him to the hearts of all classes, that the loss in the present case was felt more poignantly. All sorts and conditions of men have paid their tribute of respect to him. But of them all none have perhaps touched the mark so well as Mr. Will Crooks, the ex-M.P. for Woolwich, who to a newspaper man paid the working man's eulogy. He said he nakeda. Duke one day what was the secret of the strange success of the King with the costers of London. The Duke laughed. "Well, you see," he replied, "it is the same with us Dukes." "I remember, 'continued Will Crooks, "someone of importance in the country making a sacrifice -an immense sacrifice, too -for the sake of the poer. King Edward's gratitude was genuine. He wrung the man's hand, and said, with genuine feeling, I thank you, sir, for the sacrifice you have made for the poor. And when I tell you these things can you wonder that Will Crooks' heart is full to overflowing this morning."

Even Ireland chimes in, for once, in unison with the rest of these islands, for Irishmen feel that the King was a good friend of theirs whatever the differences may be between England and Ireland. He was often alleged to be in favour of some sort of self-government scheme for Ireland, though of course he was a strictly imperial ruler and never imposed such views on his advisors. And sportsmen, nonconformists, men of every race, class, religion or political persuasion-all meet on the same plane and acknowledge the appeal that held them in the personality of the King.

It has been carefully given out that he died of bronchitis, but I am assured that old-standing kidney trouble complicated with heart weakness had a good deal to do with the fatal attack. The doctors who were with him at Biarritz saw what was coming and hurried him home to die in his own land. For some hours before the first alarming bulletin was issued he was more or less delirious and though after that he did sign a State dooument, it was by dint of having his hand guided by his Court officers. An hour before he died he had a severe seizure, but the end came peacefully enough. His last words were an inquiry as to the welfare of his favourite terrier. I anaware that these details do not agree on all points with the statements given out officially, but the physicians know best why they frame official statements as they do, and I know that my source of information is a sure one. To say that he was walking calmly about and transacting business with his Ministers right up to the end is quite absurd.

I am also assured that great care will have to be taken with the new monarch, who is far from strong; for the weight of State affairs on one who takes his responsibilities seriously is no small anxiety to those who know him. His stomach is his bane, for he has to eat and drink with great care and moderation. His great stand-by is his wife, who has both strength of mind and body to sustain her. She cares little for Society life and is most happy in her home. From now on the strain in the Court is wholly English-a fact that will probably show itself when the coveted posts in the Household are rearranged. King George is credited with the intention to get rid of some of those who have been close to the throne for some years, and he has hardly the same knack of taking into his intimacy men of as different standings as, say, Lord Suffield and Sir Thomas Lipton, as his father had. inclines more to the strictly aristocratic families.

It has been a shooking blow to the London sesson. With Mr. Roosevelt at our doors, a great international horse show coming on, the Pageant of Empire billed as one of the greatest festivals of the century, and a host of other functions in sight, both great and small, the activities of the next six weeks or so seemed to promise record life in the veins of our old metropolitan body. Now that is all over. Postthe shoal. Those who cannot stand the dead level of a dull season are passing over, immedito seek centres where amusement may be had without breach of decorum. But it all means the loss of millions sterling to London trade. Among other postponements is that of the Imperial tour of the young princes. Very likely they will not start till the Autumn of next to enjoy the southern summer. is to stay with her mister.

She actual expenses for repatriation, purposes, the train got ready and by that means she was able | bute. to reach Buckingham Palace well before the end. It was the fact that the King was unable to greet her at the station in London that forced the doctors to issue the bulletin giving us all a hint that we might expect worse news to follow. It is said that a member of the Royal family repreached Mr. Winston Churchill for having, with his party, worried the King with the squabble between Lords and Commons, but he repudiated the suggestion with warmth. As a matter of fact the hesitation of Mr. Asquith, when faced by his angry supporters of the advanced wing, is now explained by the discovery that he was unwilling to press the King in his physical condition. How matters are to stand now is what no man can tell. The Irish may yet throw the Government out if they do not go ahead against the Lords as arranged. But there is a general impression that there will be no dissolution till next year, possibly not till after the Coronation, which will probably be held in May or June. First of all, there is the Civil List to arrange for the new circumstances of the Throne. It is really modest allowance, compared with rulers abroad. for while the sum voted to King Edward's house was £470,000, most of that sum was allocated to various purposes, and there was only the Privy Purse, a sum of £110,000, that could rightly be

The movement is being supported in many quarters and may lead to something, but as Garmany and America have also shown keen interest in the lot of Finland, it will take a sweeping boycott to include them all. THE UNIVERSITY FOR CHINA.

Lord William and Lady Florence Cecil are back from their American trip in the interests of the University for China that is to spring from the international mission movement. He reports that he has visited seven universities in the States and found the students keenly interested in the development of China and the opportunity now afforded for getting in the spadework for directing that development in what they consider right lines. He considers the prospects of the whole scheme are most

WORLD'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

While writing of the missionery movement am reminded that the great World's Missionary conference meets in Edinburgh in a month's time, and promises to be a memorable gathering. Such a programme is being: arranged on an international basis that it is clear the subject will have an interest not dreamed of by those who have not studied the fascinating variety of conditions under which missionaries labour. There will be four hundred representatives from England, 140 from Contimental societies, five hundred from the United States, and numerous delegates from the Colonies. Every religious body in existence will be represented, and they will debate on lines laid. down by eight commissions that have been studying different questions relating to missions during the past two years. In tabloid form the "meat" from eight thousand reports from all corners of the globe will be served up to this great Edinburgh conference. In addition to more essentially administrative mission matters there will be discussions on the observance of the Sabbath, mixed marriages, polygamy, and the supply of teachers and missionaries in the native churches. An important feature will be a comparison of the encouragement given by different nationalities to the study of Oriental languages, and it will be shown that Germany and France are ahead of England. There is to be a recommendation that a school for Oriental studies be established in London at an estimated expenditure of £12,000 for the training of civil servants, officers, merchants and missionaries previous to going to China and other parts east of Suez. Chinese, Japanese and Indian delegates are to take a leading part in the discussions effecting the co-operation of the foreign and native workers in the spread of Christianity. Moreover, Lord William Cecil's American report and other matters relating the University proposals will be submitted, and from that time we shall see whether the scheme is really on the highway to materilisa-

BATLORE RELIEF.

The vexed question of the relief of colonial and Indian sailors, finding themselves destitute in this country, has occupied the attention of a committee since last June, but now they have come to some conclusions and Lord Crewe has ponements and abandonments are announced by the proposals in hand with a view to taking action thereon. ANGLO-JAPANESE EXHIBITION. I paid a visit to the Japanese exhibition of Saturday when it opened, and got a glimpse its wonders before the crowds came along, an they have been doing in the wonderful weather that enddenly surprised England at Whitsuntide. There is the same old Court of Honour, and perhaps a shade too many Western build ings to give the show a really Japanese appearance, but, after all, the Japanese gardeners have done wonders in parts of the grounds, with effective scenes painted into the background have produced some wonderful effects of running waters, hillside walks, bridges and temples, . In the great halls and fine art section again there are myriad things from the East—and doubtless some from Brummagem-and many hours may be spent there by anybody who is bent on seeing it all The side shows are good, for it is not every day we have hairy Ainn and Formesan villagers among us, and the Japanese wrestlers are drawing crowds to their performances. Somebody said that the principal thing to are the cafes, and there certainly are such refreshment places at every corner and many other points as well, but such are the crowds that are making the White City their evening resort that all the cafes are kept busy and long queues of thirsty and hungry people lined up to wait their turn at the tables. All of which looks well for the success of the exhibition if this summer provide plenty of fine weather. One effect of the show is that Earl's Court, that has flourished for so long as a small resort of the same kind, will not be open this year. The White City has amothered it to death.

WHAT BABY HAS TO ENDURE.

A strong denunciation of the modern domestic nurse, and incidentally the modern "pram," contained in a letter in a recent issue of the Lancet: The writer, "Curmudgeon," days :-"A baby arrives howling. This has nothing to do with this being a bad, bad world. "But he must be strong enough to face worse things than physical rectitude; there is the 1910 domestic nurse. This female is none of your old-fashioned folk who cossets a taut little tummy with an ample hand; who brews the genial cinder tea; who gropes after truth by the aid of "The plain and simple wage-earning nurse went out when her class got education and discovered the tired back : her successor is appreciating that the modern nursery is a soft job for a salaried attendant.

"So this nurse of to-day is a nurse of thermometers, costumes, patent foods, subscriptions to a professional organ, and economies of muscular effort. She is attractive, and baby's mother fancies the young woman in her elegant uniform, and notes her pronunciation and is glad that her baby will not start speech by talking of orses and 'ouses.

"When baby is a bit more grown up he will know the modern catch-phrase of "laboursaving" this principle produced perambulators, and conduced to their name being abbreviated

"The primal pram was a three-wheeler iron-tyred, with a chair sent arranged at such a height as prevented the feet reaching the floor; a necessary strap kept the child on the shiny

"An airing in this weighty vehicle included a good joiting, with healthy fatigue perhaps; while the gritting wheels prepared the rider for the streamous life. To its further credit, no mere babe could be laid down in this old pram. "Consider the baby carriage of to-day-a light construction on its four rubber-tyred wheels and gentle springs, with mattress, monogramed quilts, fur rugs, hotwater bottles, umbrella basket, hoods and wind-screens. Teddy boar, crest on the panels, and a china handle to which is attached an elegant nurse. Gains, clear gains, surely!

"Does baby say so? Or is his fancy for a good thick arm to hold him and an expansive cushiony bosom to fall against, with tender involuntary massage as an outcome? So would his back acquire muscle, so would he learn to sit up and look his world in the face.

Carried on the arm, baby was sure of nurse's undistracted attention; a harmony of energy or fatigue embraced the two, temperature and telepathy were in accord between them; while among the chiefest boons to baby was the avoidance of that most pernicious of positions, the appine, which seems inseparable from the use of the modern baby carriage.

"Put an unclothed and unhampered infant on a suitable flat surface and observe the attitude naturally taken. The infant turns on one side. draws up the legs, and inclines the face downwards-in fact, lies curled up on his side.

"Why is every infant in a dady carriege lying on the back? First, the body of the baby carriage may be too narrow to permit the assumption of any other posture. Then the mastress is not really flat, but concave, and every movement of the carriage tends to lay the child out at the bottom of this saucer. "And how is this baby clothed? In accordance with the posture he assumes. The mother or the nurse wants-probably both want -the pleasure of dressing the baby in smart clothes. These clothes have sleeves and armholes armhole over armhole surrounds the tiny limb till the axilla is stuffed full of material: napkins and clothing fill the space between the thighs; then, once on his back, the baby is starfished for good-and if he would be could not

"Baby is pretty—they all tell the mother so. And how, pray, is one to see this if the child lies curied up on his side ? Such a pose is in contravention of nurse etiquette and a dead loss to the passing public.

"And thus baby lies on his back, his limbs patch where his adenoid erop is being cultivated and he is learning to breathe through his

PETING PAULHAM.

It really did one good to see the affectionate manner in which the hero of the London to Manchester flight was welcomed home by his countrymen last Saturday night. Not since the days of General Boulanger did Parisians manifest such enthusiasm as they did on the arrival of M. and Mme. Paulan. For several hours they went practically crasy with delight; the police were powerless to keep the huge crowd of admirers in their place. Besides, it was not a question, as they well knew, of a socialis demonstration, but one of fervill joy. From Boulogne to Paris to say nothing of the hearty send-off accorded to the hero and his charming wife at Charing-Cross and Folkestoneit was nothing but one general desire kill M. Paulhan with kindness. All these tokens both M. Paulhan and his wife sincerely appreciated; their happiert time, however, was went they reached their "Home, Sweet Home," in the early hours of Sunday, where in their villa at Sartrouville, outside Paris, was their only joy and comfort, Rene, a charming boy of five, who in the absence of his parents, had been looked after by his grandfather and grandmother. After a day's rest on Sunday-during the whole of which telegrams, letters, personal presentations of congratulatory addresses were received-both M. Paulhan and Mme. Paulhan returned to Paris on Monday, where a splendid luncheon was given in their honour at the Hotel Continental-presided over by the British Ambassador-by the Paris Daily Mail Ever since the official world has taken charge of the "King of the Air," loading him with all sorts of medals, diplomas, and other official distinctions. Paulhan will be on the tongue of thousands for many days to come; the French are loath to let the fame of a hero die early; while there exists a spark of enthusiasm it will be farmed for all it is worth.

The newspapers continue to publish congratulatory articles on the triumph of Paulhan, with whose name they thoughtfully associate that of Mr. Grahame White, the plucky British aviator, who made two repeated attempts to win the £10,000 Daily Mail prize, and was prevented from winning solely through the weather. Parisians hope soon to see Paulhan's English friend and companion in their city, when they sion." will equally cheer him for his pluck and endurance. Mr. Grahame White contemplates flying from London to Paris for £10,000. What a glorious day it will be for him if he succeeds! The feat is not impossible, though extremely ricky. M. Bleriot-the hero of the Channel flight-was not surprised to hear of M. Paulhan's brilliant flight, as he was perfectly aware what an intropid and clever aviator he was. There is probably no aviator about whom more has been written than Paulhan, this Frenchman of lowly origin, who has gained for himself world-wide fame and immense popularity, the former by his brilliancy as an aviator, and the latter by reason of his charming personality. His mcdesty, despite his remarkable success, and his almost boyish enthusiasm, combine to make him a favourite with everyone he meets. His career makes a romantic story. Starting life as a performer in a travelling circus, he, when 18, determined to try the sea, becoming a sailor on one of the Messageries Maritimes short time. At length the time came for him to serve his term with the Army, and it was then that he first acquired an interest in aeronautics, for he was drafted into the ballooning corps. Afterwards he increased his knowledge of aeronautical construction by becoming a mechanic in the employ of M. Surcouf, the well-known airship builder, and eventually joined the famous firm of Voisin Frères. This was the turning point in the career of this young man, who is only 26 years of age, and intends to do still greater things than what he has hitherto accomplished in the interest of Science. Needless to add that with the Voisin Brothers he found full scope for his remarkable mechanical genius. How he won a Voisin biplane in a competition for model aeroplanes, and how, with daring enterprise, he tormed a syndicate himself and friends, in order to purchase the necessary motor, is 'o-day well known. Then his career as an aviator commenced. Within a few weeks, on his newly acquired muchine, he made several remarkable flights, including some across country at Dousiand people began to talk of this hitherto unknown man, who seemed to be gifted with the instinct of flight. At Rheims he suddenly placed himself in the front rank of the flying men of the world with a record flight of 2 hrs. 40 min. 24 sec. This sufficed to show that he was an aviator destined to play a leading part in the development of the new science. Afterwards he came to England, flying at Blackpool, Sandown Park, and Brooklands; and later still went on a tour in America, where, owing to the unsatisfactory treatment he received he burried home to France. He can to-day afford to laugh at those who sneered at him.

LABOUE DAY.

Last Sunday, the 1st of May, or "Labour Day," was the quietest Parisians experienced: For this remarkable exemplary tranquillity we have to thank M. Briand; the efficacy of the 17,390 lb. measures taken by him to ensure order has never been equalled. The Premier is urged to maintain the same attitude in the future in the event of any threatened disturbance. Beyond a few arrests, nothing serious happoned. The Confederation of Labour, after intending to revolutionise Paris, was forced to climb down. After a vain attempt to obtain an andience of M. Briand on the previous day (Saturday) the Paris labour leaders resolved to abandon the period last year,

PARIS LETTER.

WRITTEN SPECIALLY FOR THE "HOMOROM DATLY PRESS."

Paris, May 6th.

May Day demonstrations which had been arranged on so gigantic a scale. Thousands of soldiers and policemen in the streets showed the Government's determination to repress any kind of disorder. The Provinces-with very few exceptions -were also practically free from any disturbance; Dunkerque in the North, and Marseilles in the South of France-two proverbial velcanoes-are still causing the Government trouble. Additional soldiers are being drafted into these two centres ready to cope with any emergency that may arise. The agitators have been advised to keep quiet, as they are certain to fare badly if they risk a fight with the military.

WOMEN'S SUFFRACE. In order to better concentrate attention on the woman movement twenty woman candidates have been neminated in the Paris districts; five are prominent women, among them being Mdlle, Pelletier, M.D., and Mdme, Hubertine Auchert, a veteran Suffragist. M. Louis Marin has presented two reports to the Chamber of Députés, one in favour of political equality for men and women, the other for equality of salaries for men and women teachers, thus showing that the French are taking up the woman question seriously and practically. This is more than can be said of their militant comic English sisters, who are too fond of parading about the streets in burlesque costumes.

"BLIND TO BEAUTY." France's most celebrated sculptor, M. Rodin. ridicules the idea that the beauty of classic times far surpassed that of our own, as well as that women are not far from equalling those who posed before Phidias. Speaking about modern beauty, M. Rodin observes that whereas artists in olden days had eyes to see perfection, those of to-day are blind. Greek women were beautiful, but their beauty lay also in the mind of the sculptors who represented them. "There are to-day women exactly similar-the women in the South of Europe especially. The woman of modern Italy, for instance, belongs to the same Mediterranean type as the models of Phidius." M. Rodin also points out that in the union of the beautiful and the ugly it is always the beautiful that finally gets the upper hand. Nature, by a divine law. constantly returns to the better; it incessantly turns to perfection. " Again," says M. Rodin, " beauty is everywhere; it is not beauty that is wanting to our eyes, but it is that our eyes fail to perceive it. Beauty is character and expres-

There is one amusing story of Sardon. He came to see Got on the morrow of having his play "Papillon" accepted by the Comédie. want you to play the leading rôle," said the great dramatist to the actor. "And now tell me, in strict confidence; who voted against the play being accepted in the Comité de Lecture ?" put in the red ball," said Got, who was on the Reeding Committee. Sardon made a great but he did not withdraw the rôle. Alas! Got's judgment as to qualities was amply justified. The play was heartily hissed after the first act, and only ran a

He would scratch till the pimples bled. He persevered with the Cutleura Ointment every night and within a week he was completely cured. Thanks to Cutiours he has not had any more trouble of the old complaint.

"My little girl, since vaccination, always had a rash. On the lower part of her head and neck would form white patches. I tried a lot of cintments and cold cream for this but they never did much good. She would scratch and make places bleed but she soon stopped her scratching after using Cuticura Ointment for a fortnight. She has had no return of it. She is five years old. "My baby boy had teething rash on his arms, legs and back for six weeks." It used to keep us both awake all night. He would keep scratching his little legs till he really made them bleed. I used to try different cintments for it. They did not do much good but since using Cuticura my baby hasn't suffered any more

The Times New York correspondent writes:-Mr. Gaynor's extraordinary attack on Mr. Hearst has provoked an equally extraordinary series of libel suits. Mr. Hearst's attorney has instituted a suit against the Associated Press for $500,000 (£100,000) damages for circulating an alleged unfair report of Mr. Gaynor's speech. for month ending April 30th was 30,000 lb.; ! Similar suits for large amounts have been instituted against leading newspapers in New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, and

The complaint of alleged unfairness apparently rests on the publication of Mr. Gaynor's attack without Mr. Hearst's defence, Mr. Gaynor's charge was that Mr. Hearst's newspaper suppressed the essential date in the printed faceimile of the municipal draft. Mr. Hearst replies that the date failed to appear in the photographic reproduction because of the colour of the ink. He also points out that his newspaper plainly published the missing date in the leading article accompanying the facsimile. Mr. Heart's own newspaper published the Associated Press report, but it is scarcely supposed that he will start a suit against 3,532 lb.; increase, 4,702 lb. Total for first four is considering whether there are grounds of

BRAVE YOUNG PRINCE

A telegram from Schwerin to the Berliner Tageblatt states that a boat containing the Grand Duchess Marie of Mecklenburg Schwerin capsized in the Schwerin Lake.

The Grand Duchess' 12-year-old grandson, the hereditary Prince Nicholas of Oldenburg. immediately jumped into the lake, and supported his grandmother, who had already sunk beneath the surface, and then called for further help. The hereditary prince has been awarded the Mecklenburg life-saving medal.

THE PERSONAL NOTE.

VILLAGE INCIDENT

BY MARY E. MANN. The old master sat at his brenkfast-table, his plate well filled, a cup of coffee steaming at his side. A black-edged paper stood before him propped up against the toust mak. Beside it lay the envelope in which a friend had sent it to him. From it he returned to the chap upon his plate, but only to lay down once more the knife and fork he had taken up. He looked across the table at his housekeeper, seated

"This is Queen Alexandra's message to the nation." he said. "Indeed, sir! Very thoughtful indeed of her. Her Majesty is always thoughtful." "Should you care to hear it?" "If it would not be troubling you too much,

The old master rearranged the paper against the tenst-rack, took a gulp of coffee, cleared his throat, and began. He was a great render of the daily paper, which reached him through the country post a day late; but never in the ten years she had kept house for him had the good lady behind the coffee pot heard him read anything aloud before. Truth to say, he did not do it very well; failing, for want of practice, to give to the pathetic phrases their due rhythm, stumbling over the simple words with an un-accustomed tongue.

From the depth of my poor broken heart-" he began, and pansed there with a clicking noise in his throat.

"'Give me a thought in your prayershe presently went laboriously on; but the strange noise was in his throat again; he stopped and took rafuge in his coffee-cup. " I confide my son into your care "

He got no farther. The housekeeper, whose own eyes were wet, looking up at him, saw with surprise and awe that the master's weatherbeaten old face was working with emotion, that tears were running down his cheeks.

Frightened at that unprecedented spectacle, she felt that something must be done to relieve the silence. "It is very moving," she said. It was with a happy inspiration she presently added: "It is a message to the nation, but it seems as if 'twos written to you and me, sir.'

The old master got up from his chair, turning is back on his nicely cooked chop, his wellfurnished breakfast table, his pleasant, obsequious housekeeper, and stood in the window looking out into the sunshine. He saw his trim, well-kept lawn, with its borders of golden and warm brown wallflowers, through a mist of tears. Beyond the garden were the broad flelds he and his had tilled for generations of his careful honest, loyal race. It was the landscape that in sunshine or shadow had been familiar to him all

"I have not felt-like this-since my father died." he said in a shaken voice, and with some idea of apologising for the emotion he knew had not been hidden.

Then, going from the room, he picked up and "I will keep your breakfast hot for you, sir," his finstered housekeeper called after him. Yes, yes. He would go back to his chop right enough, and go on with his day's work, of course. But for a little he wanted to be alone to get rid of that clicking in his threat; to let the wind and the sun dry those tears upon his cheek he would not be seen to wipe away. "To you and me," his housekeeper had said. She had hit the nail on the head there. It was just that-" To you and me." And that intimate, that personal note which the Queen-mother, writing from her "broken heart, had put into her message to the nation had been ever in the dead King's relations to his people, causing many and many a one to cry as the old master had put it: "I have not felt like this since my father died."

The old master passed through his garden and crossed the annlit road, turning his feet mechanically to the familiar ways of his fields and meadows. The lovely green robe of May was over all. The wild cherry-trees in the hedge-row which bordered one side of the grassgrown "drift-away" over which he walked had blosecmed fairy-white against the sky. The long grass of the bank beneath was enamelled with the gold of the cowslip, the speedwell's darling blue. Clear and clean and distinct was every flower and tree and blade of grass, as if fresh fashioned for the May morning by the hand of God. He saw them blarred and blotted through the mist of tears.

A tumbril filled with turnips overtook him as he slowly walked, one of his labourers sitting sideways on the horse.

"Cruel winds for May, master" (for although the sun shone and the skies were blue, the air was cold and light clouds of dust were blown in pulls from the fields). "They say 'twas the winds that killed our King.

"If so," the master said, "they killed the finest, bravest gentleman they ever blew on." "Right you are there, master. They tell me as he was born same year as you. "Yes. We were young together," the master said, and the tumbeil passed on.

"Together!" There it was. The personal note again. He had loved his gun in those days, his game of cards, to run up to a theatre now and then, to see the best horse win in a race. All the healthy, natural pleasures of the young. They had been easier to him, he knew, as well as more enjoyable because the great man who was dead had healthily loved them too. Presently he had joined his old shepherd, who, his flock going on before, was making his way into the next field, which was of rye. " My missus have put me inter mournin', like the rest of the folk," the shepherd said, and showed the sleeve of his dirty smock. "She'd kep' th' bit o' crape, my missus had, since our Jenny died. 'Yow shall wear it for th' King.

Tis th' last we kin du for 'm,' and she sewed it He had a gentle face and a pale blue eye, and wore his battered hat at the back of his grey head. He tooked before him with the mild, vague glauce of a man who habitually gazes over great distances at nothing in particular. Every tree of the hedgeway he knew, every dip of the hollows, every gentle rise of the land. "Th' warld fare like a strange place without 'm," the shepherd said, passing on behind his

On his way back to the breakfast-table the old master encountered his keeper, a man full of talk, and of importance just now in the place, he having once upon a time gone down to Bandringham to see the King shoot.

"A fine sportsman he were; a sportsman all through," he finished. "And I tell you how 'tis, sir. They say 'tis a loss to England—and we know 'tis that. But 'tis more so to us down here. His Majesty was a Norfolk gentleman. Our man he was. "Tis the Norfolk men that loved the King." His housekeeper had kept the old master's chop hot very skilfully; she poured him a fresh oup of coffee. He propped the message on the toest rack again. "I confide my dear son into your care," he repeated to himself; and then he looked up.

"He is the son of a dear woman and of a kind and courteous and plucky gent leman," he said.
I'd like to tell his mother we'll stand by him and do our best."-Daily Mail.
